French Mnemonics for the Periodic Table

In December, in this journal \((1)\), Michael et al. purpose some Multilingual Mnemonics for the Periodic Table. The purposed languages were the Spanish, the English and at least the German. Memorizing names and symbols could be easy but the exact horizontal and vertical is very hard to remember … but is easier by the use of mnemonics.

By this letter, we wish to continue the international letter of December by given French sentences to help young chemists.

The next 4 periods can be remembered thanks to:

Lily Béchait Bien Chez Notre Oncle François Nestor

(Lily was turning over well at our uncle François Nestor’s)

Napoléon Mangeait Allègrement Six Poulets Sans Claquer d'Argent\(^1\)

(Napoleon used to eat over six chickens without burning money)

(Krouatchev outrageously collided with Tito. Valentine shouted magnanimous. Don’t act as a corrupted Nikita! With your galvanized zinc leather, you’re definitely bothering the Kremlin’s only brewer)

à Rubis Sur Yttres, Zorba, Nonobstant, Mouilait des Tank(c)s Russes sur le Rhin Pendant qu'Agacée, Candy Insistât sur Son Sbire Tellement Inquiet et Xénophobe (ou Xylophage)

(In Ruby-Sur-Yttres, Zorba, nevertheless, was moulding Russian tanks on the Rhine while, harassed, Candy was insisting on her so worried and xenophobic henchman)
We hope that these sentences will help French speaking students.

Notes

1. It must be taken care that Ar is argon and not silver in French

2. A more incorrect politically sentence can be asked to the authors.
